MEDIA RELEASE

Temporary Road Signs for FIFA Confederations Cup

In preparation for the FIFA Confederations Cup (FCC) the City of Johannesburg in conjunction with the Johannesburg Roads Agency (JRA) has installed temporary road signs to direct traffic and pedestrians to different destinations and to inform them of restricted areas during the FCC period.

Most temporary road signs are reflective yellow in colour to increase visibility and inform motorists that the information supplied on the signs are of temporary nature. Community members should be on the look out and start familiarising themselves with these signs, what they mean and where they can be found.

The temporary road signs will be removed or covered 30 days after the FCC, that is, at the end of July 2009. They will be re-erected in 2010 six weeks before the FIFA World Cup.

These signs will also be used for other events beyond 2010 as the material allows for reuse.

These are some of the signs:

Advance Temporary Road Traffic Information Signs that informs motorists that only vehicles with the correct accreditation/ permit may proceed in the direction indicated by the arrow.

These signs will be displayed in advance of the traffic free zone surrounding the stadium.

Temporary directional sign to an approved Park and Ride facility for the FIFA 2009 Confederation Cup event. Spectators can park their vehicles and board a bus to be transported to the stadium.

TR208

Temporary Regulatory Road Traffic Command Sign that prohibits the access of unauthorized vehicles (vehicles without the correct accreditation) beyond a specific point.

These signs will be displayed at the start of the traffic free zone surrounding the stadium.
