

Pensioners celebrate JRA work

BY ROSE SMITH

Wilgeheuwel — Three stop signs were erected at the dangerous T-junction in Sovereign Road and all the road markings were completed.

But these improvements had been more than two years in the making.

Residents of the Wilgeheuwel Retirement Village celebrate the erection of the new stop signs.

The signs were put up on Thursday afternoon last week, thanks to Conel Mackay at the Johannesburg Roads Agency (JRA) who persevered in getting the job done as quickly as possible.

When residents of the Wilgeheuwel Retirement Village saw the workers, they opened a bottle of wine in celebration and thanks.

The sharp curve chevrons will be removed in the very near future.

And the road in front of the retirement village should be surfaced by the end of June, according to the JRA engineer.
